Time Spent With You

I cannot recall every time we laughed or cried
My memories tend to fade over the years
But I do know that all of you I carry inside
As my thoughts of you, are accompanied by tears.
I do not profess to know everything that you felt when you were alone
But I know of the things that you have told me in confidence and trust That is what I cherish the most, when I knew that our relationship had grown I always thought that there would be more time, more moments, now I must adjust.
I couldn't possibly know that your journey would come to an end here and now.
It is something that we cannot prepare for and we will always want more time But maybe we can find some solace in celebrating your life the best way we know how,
By sharing our thoughts and smiles of a life in its prime.
A clock or calendar cannot measure the time we spent together.
It is testament of love that transcends our years together and apart
The time we spent together is what we will always have for it is forever
It is all we take with us and when we join you one day, complete will be our heart
