When The Time Comes

When the time comes to welcome someone into the family, smiles are shared, pictures are taken, and hands are held.

When the time comes to help a loved one in need, we put our heads together, roll up our sleeves, and deflect those demons. When the time comes to be a listener for those you share a name with, words are limited, ears are alert, and hearts are open. When the time comes to send a loved one to their home in the skies, tears are shed, squabbles are forgotten, and times are remembered. When the time comes to say our final goodbyes, hearts are heavy, eyes are glossy, but smiles appear from all times that have come and gone.
