I seen a Dove. It's pure whiteness bleached the red stained blood on sidewalks. It's wings fluttered off the heartache of gun shots wounds that feels like acid. This Dove webbed feet imprinted the love of a father, brother, grandson, nephew, and friend. The Purple horizons transformed to an array of shades that only a dove understands. The dove whispered in a language i did not speak, He said family be tough. For only a dove can bring the peace of solidarity. I felt the breeze as the dove painfully went away Chonce we Love you we just wish we didn't feel that wind
