Reflections of Life

Marjorie Elizabeth Grant was born on April 7, 1953 in Kingston, Jamaica. She was the third of seven children born to Isoline and Walter Grant.

Growing up, Marjorie was inseparable from her parents. Throughout her life, their welfare and well being were always her top priority. Isoline and Walter Grant created a truly loving home where they taught their children the importance of family, faith and tradition. One longstanding tradition in the Grant family was gathering around the table to play an intense game of dominoes. Marjorie's father, Walter, was an avid player and instilled a deep love of the game in his seven children. Following the example of her parents Marjorie was a woman of strong faith. She was baptized at the Emmanuel Hope Baptist Church in Montclair, NJ and her unwavering faith in God remained a cornerstone throughout her life.

Marjorie always took great pride in her appearance and presentation. Her impeccable sense of style was just as present in her youth as it was in adulthood. In Jamaica, she went to Kingston Technical School where her poise, flair for fashion, and decorum seldom went unnoticed.

In June 1970, Marjorie migrated with her parents to the United States. She graduated from East Orange High School in New Jersey and continued her pursuit of education in business and trade schools, including Katherine Gibbs & Wilfred Beauty Academy. However, Marjorie would soon learn that her true passion was in the travel industry. She began her airline career in the 1980's at World Airways. Marjorie went on to work for People's Express, Eastern Airlines, Continental Airlines, and finally United Airlines. Marjorie's career would take her traveling around the world as a flight attendant and culminate in her successful work in various management positions and areas of operations for Continental and United Airlines.

Marjorie was a single parent to three children. As a member of the Parent Teachers Association Marjorie played an active role in her children's academic success, including their interactions with teachers and their involvement in extracurricular school activities Marjorie was a true advocate, not only for her children but for many others throughout her life. She was never afraid to speak her mind, yet, she was known for her warm, compassionate heart. Marjorie carried herself with unassuming strength, grace, and elegance. Her confidence, boldness, courage, and generosity were just some of her defining characteristics.

Marjorie loved and was loved by her entire family. She was a special aunty to her nieces and nephews, a gracious grandmother to her grandchildren and a benevolent woman to all of her friends. She was well known for her infectious laughter and sense of humor. One example of her humor was giving nicknames to those close to her, including "Choc full of nuts", "Little Jup", "Red Woman", and "Chesapeake".

Throughout her life Marjorie shared many wonderful moments with the people who were lucky enough to call her daughter, mother, sister, aunty and friend. She could often be found dancing, putting a smile on someone's face, or simply enjoying being a part of her community..

Marjorie leaves behind her dear mother, Isoline Grant, six siblings, Delores, Kenneth, Elaine, Winston, Beverly and Ivorine, her three children Andrew, Keith, and Keisha, eight grandchildren, and a host of nieces, nephews, cousins, and friends.

Though our beloved Marjorie is gone, her legacy will never be forgotten.
Thank you
